

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of Cape May and of Many Who Are Spending the Summer There—Women Interested in the Appointment of Mrs. George Lorimer

THERE'S still very little doing in the social world, but the resorts are gay and the pretty frocks one sees on the pretty burned girls are among the pleasures of the resorts. I saw Alva Sergeant in Cape May on Sunday wearing the loveliest green-and-white check gingham. It looked so cool and fresh and was made so simply with short, wide-hemmed skirt and the straight line bodice finished with white collar and cuffs. It always seems funny to me to see Alva without white hair or bright red hair. That sounds queer, doesn't it? But you know she has invariably worn wig of those colors in the wondrous dances she has taken part in so many times at the Charity Ball and other good charity affairs that it always seems funny to see her and her own pretty hair. She is good looking and so graceful, I think.

Miss Robinson, from Baltimore, who is visiting here, was with her on Sunday, and she looks as if she, too, is a light blue dimity frock much be-tucked. Both of them were "knitting away for dear life." I wonder what we girls will do if sweaters ever go out of fashion. We won't have any summer knitting to do. We'll all have to turn to afghans and children's socks and leg-ings.

Neither Alva nor Miss Robinson wore hats, and the sun had burned gold threads through their hair.

MRS. JOYCE SEWELL and Mrs. Hal Parr, who were Annabelle and Ethel McCree, respectively, caused quite a mild excitement by walking on the boardwalk at Cape May carrying canes. Every now and then one starts the cane-carrying fad, and then it dies out again. I rather like it myself. It's sort of nice to have something to do with your hand, and a parasol is more or less of a nuisance generally speaking. You feel "all dressed up" with a parasol.

It's funny how Cape May takes a hold on some families. The McCree's, for instance. The late Mr. George D. McCree had a cottage there, and they used to go down every year when Mrs. Sewell and Mrs. Parr and George D., Jr., who married Nellie Williams, were all children, and here they are all going down every summer now with their children, just as they did twenty and twenty-five years ago. Miss Hannah and her brother, Mr. X. Scott—have gone for years. Their father and mother had a cottage there, and for years and years they occupied it. Nellie Scott used to also go down. He died several years ago, you remember, and Mr. X. Scott, who is really Alexander Scott, married Helen Struthers in 1914.

Then the McCree family. They have a cottage on Hughes street, and every year they have spent six months there. Only Miss Emily McCree and her brother and sister, Mrs. Parr and Mrs. Wilson McCree, are left of that large family, and Mrs. Horace Fassitt, who spends much of her time with her children, Mrs. Wharton and Mrs. Fassitt, Mrs. Chas. Hagan and John Fassitt.

I HEAR that Miss Mary Converse is returned to Rosemont. She has been away for nearly a year, you know. Last summer she went to Japan and there she was until May of this year, returning to the United States in June. She has been spending the summer in New London, Conn., and returned to Rosemont yesterday. She was a wonderful thing to tell us of her trip. I doubt not.

ALL women will be interested, as I am, to hear that Mrs. George Lorimer has been made vice chairman of the Republican National Committee. It is interesting to see the women the leaders are choosing. Mrs. Marley Warburton has another state position and Mrs. Willis Martin. All these women have proved that they are fine executives and that is what we want. Besides being charming women they have brains. Mrs. Lorimer is the first to be named. The nineteenth amendment was ratified. And those of us who know her work as chairman of the Independence Square Red Cross and the chairman of the American committee of the Emergency Aid know that the ways and means committee has a most able woman as vice chairman.

My Mrs. Lorimer riding down Chestnut street just a few days ago wearing a small dark blue velvet hat with a narrow brim in front and rather fine sides. It was trimmed with an uncurled ostrich feather of the same shade of blue. She wore a dark-blue gorette crepe frack.

Mrs. Walter Thomson, who is chairman of the Philadelphia branch of the Republican women, is doing good work at the headquarters, 506 South Broad street. She is another splendid executive.

It seems to me that even if some of the women have not wanted the vote, even if some have opposed it, now that it is constitutional it is a duty to use it. Just as I have always held that all women should vote and help to make policies better instead of grumbling about them and forgetting to register and all the other careless things men do, so do

I hold now as long as we women have it we should use it.
